The Job Interview

He must be fifty years old.

That's my first thought as I welcome Benjamin Walks into my office, twenty minutes late. I do that on purpose with job candidates – make them wait past the appointment time.

I shake his hand and smile, motioning him to a small chair in front of my large desk. He sits. It's a horrible chair. Benjamin Walks is applying for a Senior IT position – about 130k a year. I'll lowball him, saying the position only pays 90k to start.

He's well over fifty years old – look at those wrinkles in his brow. Look at those gray hairs. I thought old guys used Grecian Formula hair coloring. Not Benjamin Walks, he's all old in his ordinary blue suit with his plain red tie and his gray hairs.

My job is to dissect his resume and lay his soul barefor easy corporateanalysis. I will render him exposed and naked to secular, circumspect evaluation. He needs a job and I... I have the power to grant it. Or not. Before asking Mr. Walks a single question, I have made my decision. I'm that good at my job. I can draw a conclusion without having any pesky information. I smile at him like Julius Caesar, giving a thumb down. But I must go through the motions, so I ask the questions. I am nothing if not professional.

“What makes you think you are qualified for this position, Mr. Walks?”

He replies. I nod but don’t pay attention to what he says. It sounded like a competent response, but I’m thinking about going to Subway for lunch. A meatball sub would really hit the spot.

“Benjamin, what skills do you possess that set you apart from other applicants?”

He answers. It’s something about how much experience he has and projects he led – blah, blah, blah. It’s just another way of saying he is old and worn out.

The clock shows 11:45, so I need to wrap this up before Subway gets too busy. I point, aim, and level the last question I plan on asking Benjamin Walks.

“Ben – I can call you Ben, right? Good. Ben, tell me why I should hire you?”

This one is designed to put applicants back on their heels. It’s like giving a Rubik’s Cube to a monkey. I place my elbows on my desk and temple my fingers together as I wait for Benjamin Walks to respond. I can almost taste my meatball sub, now. Meatballs. Mmm.

One beat.

Two beats.

“Why should you... hire me?” he carefully asks and clears his throat.

“Well, I’ve never been convicted of a felony. I’m over 18 and a U.S. Citizen. I’m authorized to work in this country. I have good personal hygiene. I show upon time for work and usually show up early. I keep my work space tidy. I will pass any drug-test you have. I don’t take long lunch breaks. I don’t steal office supplies, and I rarely, if ever, call in sick.”

It’s like he’s reading off the job application form. Sad, really. I start to interrupt him but Mr. Walks seemed to be settling into a groove, like Eminem, starting to rap.

“I’m a hard worker and I’m dedicated. I have a can-do attitude and I’m a Self-Starter. I have excellent written and verbal communication skills. I’m a go-getter. I will identify the problem and offer a solution.”

He locks eyes with me and adds, “I really enjoy a challenge. I’m a team player. I like working with people, and I work well independently. I also work well as part of a group. I can give orders and I can take orders – lead or follow. I can take constructive criticism.”

I started to say we were looking for an eager learner, but he continued.

“I’m a quick study. I follow through. I manage time efficiently. I’m proficient in the Internet, network protocols and security. I know Microsoft Office, Windows OS and forty-five millimeter handguns. I know how to make a high-yield explosive device out of everyday household items.”

He stood up from the stupidly uncomfortable chair and leaned over my desk, saying, “You see, I’ve got what it takes. I’ve got the world on a string. I can make a difference. I know where Hoffa is buried. I can recite the Declaration of Independence when I’m drunk. I can locate Lithuania on a map. I can two-step. I’m ambidextrous, and some people call me the space cowboy, some call me the gangster of love, some call me Maurice because I speak of the pompous of love.

You see, I am The One that was prophesied to come during your darkest hour. I can pull the Sword from the Stone. I am the Jedi Master. I am Nero and I see the Matrix. I am the Walrus. Goo-goo-ga-jooob.”

His red tie draped over my desk as he leaned in and the next words seemed to hiss with steam from his mouth.

“As for my weaknesses... I have one.”

He moved in even closer and his nose almost – but not quite – touched mine and said, “I have been known, at times, to fly into vengeful fits of homicidal rage when I get turned down for a job I am overqualified for by some self-important, gen-X rascal. But other than that, no. No real weaknesses.”

Mr. Benjamin Walks stood coolly, straightened his tie and leaned back against the wall of my increasingly small office and added, “That’s just a few of the reasons, right off the top of my head, why you should hire me.”

What else could I say?

“Wh... when can you start?”

II. Translate the text “How to become an English teacher” from English into Ukrainian:

Studying english I am learning English and I am planning to become an English teacher but I have no idea how to start. What do I need in order to start being an English teacher. So first if you're still learning, if you're still studying the language, if you're in the middle of the process, I would say invest in learning more and becoming a pro on having at least B2 or C1 level.

When you have that kind of English levels then start teaching the people you know. We all start without brothers and sisters, neighbours, friends and people that, yes, they'll be our guinea pigs.

As a student you have had the classes from other teachers, so you know the things that the teachers did and the classes and the activities you had that you can apply with your first students. So start by doing that, do it for free or charge very little if that's the case. It's no problem if you do something wrong. And nobody's gonna die because of a bad English class.

Or you can start working for an English school. There are many schools that have very nice programmes for new teachers. Schools usually have a structure they usually follow a book or a methodology. It's easier for you to see from other teachers you're not going to be alone. You have the material, you don't have to create everything by yourself.

Everybody is going to start from somewhere, never believe that your first class or your first students are going to be the best, they're not. You have to start somehow and you don't have to study everything before you have a student.

A DAY'S WAIT

by Ernest Hemingway

Hemingway, Ernest (1899-1961): a prominent American novelist and short-story writer. He began to write fiction about 1923, his first books being the reflection of his war experience. "The Sun Also Rises" (1926) belongs to this period as well as "A Farewell to Arms" (1929) in which the antiwar protest is particularly powerful.

During the Civil War Hemingway visited Spain as a war correspondent. His impressions of the period and his sympathies with the Republicans found reflection in his famous play "The Fifth Column" (1937), the novel "For Whom the Bell Tolls" (1940) and a number of short stories.

His later works are "Across the River and into the Trees" (1950) and "The Old Man and the Sea" (1952) and the very last novel "Islands in the Stream" (1970) published after the author's death. In 1954 he was awarded a Nobel Prize for literature.

Hemingway's manner is characterized by deep psychological insight into the human nature. He early established himself as the master of a new style: laconic and somewhat dry.

He came into the room to shut the windows while we were still in bed and I saw he looked ill. He was shivering, his face was white, and he walked slowly as though it ached to move. "What's the matter, Schatz?"¹

"I've got a headache."
 "You'd better go back to bed."
 "No, I'm all right."
 "You go to bed. I'll see you when I'm dressed."

But when I came downstairs he was dressed, sitting by the fire, looking a very sick and miserable boy of nine years. When I put my hand on his forehead I knew he had a fever.

"You go up to bed," I said, "you're sick."
 "I'm all right," he said.

When the doctor came he took the boy's temperature.

"What is it?" I asked him.

"One hundred and two."²

Downstairs, the doctor left three different medicines in different colored capsules with instructions for giving them. One was to bring down the fever, another a purgative, the third to overcome an acid condition. The germs of influenza can only exist in an acid condition, he explained. He seemed to know all about influenza and said there was nothing to worry about if the fever did not go above one hundred and four degrees. This was a light epidemic of flu and there was no danger if you avoided pneumonia.

Back in the room I wrote the boy's temperature down and made a note of the time to give the various capsules.

"Do you want me to read to you?"

¹Schatz (Germ.): darling

²102 °F (Fahrenheit) correspond to 38.9 °C (Centigrade), The Fahrenheit thermometer is used throughout the British Commonwealth and in the United States. The boiling point of the Fahrenheit thermometer is 212°, the freezing point — 32°, the normal temperature of a human body is about 99°. The Centigrade thermometer, used in Russia, France and other countries, has 0° (zero) for its freezing point and 100° for the boiling point

"All right, if you want to," said the boy. His face was very white and there were dark areas under his eyes. He lay still in the bed and seemed very detached from what was going on.

I read aloud from Howard Pyle's³ Book of Pirates, but I could see he was not following what I was reading.

"How do you feel, Schatz?" I asked him.

"Just the same, so far," he said.

I sat at the foot of the bed and read to myself while I waited for it to be time to give another capsule. It would have been natural for him to go to sleep, but when I looked up he was looking at the foot of the bed, looking very strangely.

"Why don't you try to go to sleep? I'll wake you up for the medicine."

"I'd rather stay awake."

After a while he said to me, "You don't have to stay in here with me, Papa, if it bothers you."

"It doesn't bother me."

"No, I mean you don't have to stay if it's going to bother you."

I thought perhaps he was a little light-headed and after giving him the prescribed capsules at eleven o'clock I went out for a while.

It was a bright, cold day, the ground covered with a sleet that had frozen so that it seemed as if all the bare trees, the bushes, the cut brush and all the grass and the bare ground had been varnished with ice. I took the young Irish setter for a little walk up the road and along a frozen creek.

At the house they said the boy had refused to let anyone come into the room.

"You can't come in," he said. "You mustn't get what I have." I went up to him and found him in exactly the position I had left him, white-faced, but with the tops of his cheeks flushed by the fever, staring still, as he had stared, at the foot of the bed.

I took his temperature.

"What is it?"

"Something like a hundred," I said. It was one hundred and two and four tenths.

"It was a hundred and two," he said.

"Who said so?"

"The doctor."

"Your temperature is all right," I said. "It's nothing to worry about."

"I don't worry," he said, "but I can't keep from thinking."

"Don't think," I said. "Just take it easy."

"I'm taking it easy," he said and looked worried about something.

"Take this with water."

"Do you think it will do any good?"

"Of course, it will,"

I sat down and opened the Pirate Book and commenced to read but I could see he was not following, so I stopped.

"About what time do you think I'm going to die?" he asked.

"What?"

"About how long will it be before I die?"

"You aren't going to die. What's the matter with you?"

"Oh, yes, I am. I heard him say a hundred and two."

"People don't die with a fever of one hundred and two. That's a silly way to talk!"

"I know they do. At school in France the boys told me you can't live with forty-four degrees. I've got a hundred and two."

He had been waiting to die all day, ever since nine o'clock in the morning.

³Pyle, Howard (1853-1911): an American illustrator, painter and author.

"You poor Schatz," I said. "Poor old Schatz, it's like miles and kilometers. You aren't going to die. That's a different thermometer. On that thermometer thirty-seven is normal. On this kind it's ninety-eight."

"Are you sure?"

"Absolutely," I said. "It's like miles and kilometers. You know, like how many kilometers we make when we do seventy miles in the car?"

"Oh," he said.

But his gaze at the foot of the bed relaxed slowly. The hold over himself relaxed too, finally, and the next day it was very slack and he cried very easily at little things that were of no importance.

PRE-READING

1. Can you label the different countries of the United Kingdom on the map below? Do you know the names of their capital cities?

2. What words / phrases do you associate with each of these countries? Make a list below.

Britain and the British

So, what is the United Kingdom?

To give it its full title it's 'The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland'. You might hear it referred to as Britain, Great Britain or more often, simply as 'The UK'. Four countries make up the UK – England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. It consists of a group of islands - 2 large ones and several hundred smaller ones. By far the largest island is that which is divided into three countries - England, Wales and Scotland. This island is about 700 miles long and is 300 miles at its widest point.

England's capital London is also the capital city of the UK. Most of England consists of lowland with some mountainous terrain northwest of a line drawn between the Humber estuary in the East and the river Exe in the Southwest. London is an ancient city. It grew up around the first point where the Roman invaders found the Thames narrow enough to build a bridge. They found a small Celtic settlement then known as Londinium and by A. D. 300 they had turned it into a sizeable port and an important trading centre with a wall which enclosed the homes of about 50,000 people.

One in seven of the population of the United Kingdom is a Londoner. It is the home of the nation's commerce and finance, the main centre of its legal system and the press. It has the largest university and the greatest possibilities forentertainment and for sport in the country. London is one of the famous capital cities of the world, and every year attracts crowds of visitors from home and abroad. They come to explore its historic buildings, to see its museums and galleries, its streets and parks, and its people.

Just as Wall Street in New York is the centre of commerce and finance so the City of London, sometimes called "the square mile" is the centre for money matters. Here in Threadneedle Street is the Bank of England — sometimes called "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" — the central banking institution whose pound notes form the main currency in the country. Fleet Street near St. Paul's Cathedral used to be a busy street full of foreign, provincial and London newspaper offices such as The Daily Express, The Daily Telegraph.

Like many capital cities, London grew up along a major river. The Thames divides London sharply in two. Most of central London is on the north bank of the river. The Thames at London is tidal and there have been several serious floods. It is always interesting for tourists to take a trip along the Thames in a boat as it gives a strikingpanorama of London. The best way to see the city quickly is from the top of London red double-decker buses. Special tourist buses go on two-hour circular tours. The other quick and easy way of getting around.

Northern Ireland is part of the UK but is physically separated from mainland England, Wales and Scotland by the wild and sometimes treacherous Irish Sea. Northern Ireland has sea to the north and east, and borders the Republic of Ireland on the west and south, making it the only UK country with a European border.

Unsurprisingly these physical characteristics affect the mindset of its population, and it is not unusual to find some people who feel simultaneously a UK citizen, and Irish citizen and a European citizen. Alternatively, others shun their UK identity and embrace their Irishness, and many others insist on being 'British' and ignore their Irish neighbours. In a population of 1.5 million nearly 60% are under 40, making it a country with an influential youth culture.

Wales is a land of rugby, singing and beautiful scenery situated on the western side of the UK. Its population is just under three million which is about 5% of the total UK population. The main cities are Cardiff, the capital city, Swansea and Newport. It is more mountainous than England, particularly in North and Mid Wales. Wales was ruled directly from London until 1999 when the first elections to the Welsh National Assembly were held. The Assembly has some powers specific to people in Wales and can make decisions on areas such as education and health.

The Welsh language is probably the most important thing that distinguishes Wales from the rest of the UK. Welsh (or Cymraeg) is one of Europe's oldest languages and is spoken by one in five Welsh people. This number doubles among children and teenagers which shows that the language is very much alive among the young. Towns, villages and cities in Wales often have both a Welsh and an English name and Wales is home to one of the longest place names in the world – Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch which means St Mary's (Church) by the white aspen over the whirlpool, and St Tysilio's (Church) by the red cave! Wales is also known for its 'Eisteddfodau' which are festivals celebrating Welsh language, art, culture and heritage and which include an eclectic mix of music, dance, drama, debate and cultural competitions.

To the North is Scotland which consists of two very distinct regions known as the Highlands and the Lowlands. The Highlands region is to the North and West of the country and is much more mountainous than its lowland sister. The Lowlands region is home to most of Scotland's population. It's here where Scotland's capital, Edinburgh and the largest city of Glasgow will be found. Scotland is well known for its stunning landscapes, beautiful beaches and lochs, which are fresh water lakes. There are over 600 square miles of lochs in Scotland including the most famous one, Loch Ness. It has a population of just over five million people which is about 8.5 per cent of the whole UK population.

Scotland also hosts one of the biggest arts festivals in the world. This is commonly known as the Edinburgh Festival but is actually made up of a number of different festivals which happen at different times of the year, though many do take place in August and September. Stereotypical images of Scotland often focus on things like tartan, kilts, heather and haggis as well as the scenery.

VOCABULARY EXERCISES

The Do's and Don'ts of British Life

Please don't jump / run a queue in Great Britain. The British all stand / stay in line when waiting for a bus or when buying things. If you jump the queue the people behind you may well massacre / kill you. First come – first served!

If you go into a pub / pab for a nice pint / pin, then don't forget to order at the bar and pay as you go. If you are taking your children with you they will only be allowed into the pubs, which have a “family / famili room”!

Don't be annoyed if your "pint" hasn't got a "head / neck" on it, because if there is too much "head" on the beer the British think they are being done / made.

The British like to smile, so do smile, but don't say, "Hi" to somebody you don't even know. They may feel / fill embarrassed, because they don't know you.

Don't forget to use your fork upside / upsead down in Britain. We British are experts in balancing peas on the top of our forks. We don't use our fork as a shovel / shavel.

If you meet somebody don't forget to say, "How do you do?" and shake his / her hand. Don't expect / expact an answer, because this is only a greeting and not a question. The person you are greeting will then answer, "How do you do?"

Don't spit in the street – okay I didn't expect you to, but just in case / occasion. The british hate this and consider it to be extremely bad / badly mannered.

If someone is in your way, then say, "Excuse me, please". They will then move / moove out of your way, straight away.

Please hold the door open for others, because the British will never throw / open the door into your face.

Please and thank you are two very important words, which you should use as often / oftenly as possible.

The British are little / least reserved at first, but given time they will be good friends.

Don't worry about making language mistakes, because the Brits won't hold them against you. They will try hard to understand what you are saying.

The Brits are extremely polite / unpolite – perhaps too polite at times. However it never hurts to be polite to others.

If you enter a room full of people, for example, at a party, then don't go round shaking everyone's hand because nobody expects you to.

If you are invited to a party or wedding at a restaurant or pub, then don't expect the drinks to be paid for. Table drinks are paid for, but not the rest of the drinks, which you consume / eat.

Normally you will find Brits to be very friendly and really helpful.

So, if you are thinking of travelling to Britain, don't forget to read these rules first.

BRITISH MEALS

British cuisine is diverse and influenced by both its history and geography. From hearty breakfasts to traditional roasts, there is a wide range of dishes that bring out the flavors of the British Isles.

A Traditional English Breakfast

One iconic dish to start the day is a traditional English breakfast, which is a cooked breakfast. This meal is often referred to as a "fry-up" and typically consists of bacon, sausages, eggs, grilled tomatoes, baked beans, mushrooms, and hash browns. The fried items in this meal are known for being crispy and delicious. Egg yolks are the yellow part of the egg and add a creamy texture to the dish. They can be fried, poached, or scrambled to suit individual preferences. To add flavor, the food may be covered in salt and pepper. Another option is a continental breakfast, which consists of lighter options like croissants, pastries, and fruit.

Eleveneses and a traditional lunch

In the late morning, it's common to have a break called "eleveneses." This is a time for a small snack, such as biscuits or cookies, along with a cup of tea. Luncheon, also known as lunch, follows eleveneses, and it usually includes a variety of dishes. A popular option is a ploughman's lunch, which typically includes cheese, cold meats, pickles, salad, and a bread roll.

Afternoon Tea

In the late afternoon, many people enjoy a full afternoon tea. This elegant and indulgent experience involves a selection of finger sandwiches, scones with clotted cream and jam, and various pastries and cakes. A cream tea is a simpler version of afternoon tea with just scones, clotted cream, and jam.

High Tea and Afters

In the late afternoon, many Britons indulge in a meal known as high tea or afternoon tea. This is not your typical tea-break! High tea is a more substantial affair and includes a variety of savory and sweet treats. It often includes sandwiches, scones with clotted cream and jam, cakes, pastries, and a pot of tea. It's a delightful way to relax and socialize with friends or family.

After a delicious meal, it's time for "afters," which refers to desserts or sweet treats enjoyed after a main course. Popular afters include puddings, cakes, and pies.

Meals and Snacks

Throughout the day, there are other popular meals and snacks. For brunch, which combines breakfast and lunch, dishes like poached eggs, ham, and toast are commonly enjoyed. A continental breakfast, on the other hand, consists of lighter options like croissants, pastries, and fruit. Another favorite is the roast beef sandwich with stuffing. Stuffing is a mixture of bread, herbs, and spices that is cooked inside poultry or used as a filling for sandwiches. It adds a delicious savory flavor to the dish.

Traditional Dishes and Famous Spreads

Apart from the meals mentioned above, British cuisine is also famous for its traditional dishes like the Sunday roast. This meal is typically eaten on Sundays and consists of roasted meat (such as beef, lamb, or chicken), roasted potatoes, Yorkshire pudding, vegetables, and gravy.

Meat and two veg is another classic British dish. It refers to a main course that includes a serving of meat accompanied by two different types of vegetables.

Some well-known spreads and condiments in British cuisine include Marmite, a savory yeast extract, and marmalade, a preserve made from citrus fruits. These spreads add unique flavors to meals and are loved by many Britons.

Disease Outbreaks

Apart from its delicious dishes, British cuisine has also faced challenges in the past. In the 1980s, the country dealt with the outbreak of mad cow disease, a neurological disorder in cattle that affected humans who consumed contaminated beef products. Foot-and-mouth disease, another contagious viral disease that affects livestock, has also impacted British agriculture.

In summary, British cuisine offers a range of delicious dishes for all tastes and occasions. From hearty breakfasts to elegant afternoon teas, there is something to satisfy every palate. So, why not explore the flavorful world of British food and indulge in the rich culinary traditions of the United Kingdom?

So to sum up, British national dishes represent a rich culinary heritage that is enjoyed by people around the world. From a traditional English breakfast to indulgent afternoon teas, these dishes offer a delightful blend of flavors and textures. So, the next time you have a chance to try British cuisine, don't pass on the opportunity to savor these delicious treats!

The World of Parkour

Ever climbed up a building? Bounced off walls? Or jumped from rooftop to rooftop? Parkour practitioners do it every day. Parkour is the “art of displacement”, or the ability to move from one place to another as fast as possible. You use only your body and there is no safety equipment (as in other extreme sports).

In 1902, a volcano in the Caribbean island of Martinique blew up. A French naval officer on the scene, Lt. George Hébert managed to coordinate the rescue of over 700 people, both indigenous and European. He noticed, as he did so, how people moved, some well, some badly, around the obstacles in their path, and how this affected their chances of survival. Hébert had travelled widely and was well aware of skills many indigenous people exhibited in being able to traverse the natural environment. From these experiences, Hébert developed a training discipline which he called ‘the natural method’ in which climbing, jumping and running techniques were used to negotiate obstacles. His method was adopted by the French military and became the basis for all their training. In time, it became known as parcours du combattant – the path of the warrior.

Raymond Belle was a practitioner of parkour in Vietnam in the 1950s. He had great athletic ability, and the skills and agility he had learnt through parkour earned him a reputation as an agile and elite soldier. In later life, he returned to France and passed on his skills to his son, David, who combined what he had learnt from his father with his own knowledge of martial arts and gymnastics, and in time, the sport of parkour was born.

Parkour involves a range of ‘moves’, although none are official. They involve vaulting, jumping and landing accurately on small and narrow features, catching ledges, traversing high wall and landing with a rolling impact to absorb impacts. Practitioners, called “traceurs” (which means “to go fast”, in French), say it is an interaction between the buildings and structures that surround you – combining aesthetics and physical control.

Belle formed a group of traceurs called the Yamikasi, meaning ‘strong man, strong spirit’, that included his friend, Sebastian Foucan. In time, the two of them started to follow different paths. Belle concentrated on the art of getting from place to place in the most efficient way possible, while Foucan developed his own style which involved more self expression. This he termed freerunning.

From the late 1990s, the art and sport of parkour spread worldwide. Both Belle and Foucan gave interviews and appeared on television. In 2003, filmmaker Mike Christie made the film Jump London, and urban freerunning, or freeflow, began to dominate the London scene. But it was the arrival of YouTube in 2005 that really brought freerunning to a global audience. People around the world began to post their videos online, making freerunning a mainstream sport, and in 2007, the first major freerunning and parkour competition was held in Vienna.

Since parkour values freedom, there are few facilities dedicated to the practice. Traceurs use both rural and urban areas, typically parks, offices and abandoned buildings. Traceurs generally respect the environment they practise in, and since part of their philosophy is ‘leave no trace’, there have been few concerns over damage to property. However, law enforcement and fire and rescue teams argue that freerunners are risking their lives needlessly, especially when they practise at height. However, practitioners argue that injuries are rare, because they rely on their own hands and feet rather than things out of their immediate control, such as ice and wheels, as is the case with skiing and race-driving.

Parkour is popping up everywhere, including Hollywood. The 2006 James Bond film Casino Royale opens with a scene featuring parkour “traceur” Sebastien Foucan. He grew up practising parkour in Paris. “I always thought of parkour as an art”, he says in an interview with BBC News. “When I practise my art, I feel a real connection between my body, spirit and my environment.” Traceurs often refer to parkour as a philosophy or a way of life rather than sport. “In a lot of ways, Parkour is a means of reclaiming what it means to be a human being. It teaches us to move using the natural methods that we should have learned from infancy. It teaches us to touch the world and interact with it, instead of being sheltered by it,” says one American “traceur”.

H) I'm not so sure really ... flying can be quite boring ... queuing up at the check-in desk... going through passport control... sitting for ages in the departure lounge... then the flight itself can be quite uncomfortable ... no ... I'm not sure I agree.

Exercise 2. Discuss the following issues and choose a holiday from the options above:

- which would be the best type of holiday to go on
- what you would like to do while you're there
- how long you would like to go for
- what preparations you need to make for the trip.

Coconut Island

I was told Coconut Island was developing fast. Presumably this meant it was a once pristine island on the downhill slope to environmental ruin caused by uncontrolled tourist development. Perhaps they meant it in a more positive light. I wasn't sure. I went there to find out.

Driving down the east coast expressway, you don't see much. The landscape is pretty flat most of the way with just a few trees and roadside shacks selling pineapples. Oh, and of course the usual construction teams in the never-ending process of widening and 'improving' the road. However, once you get to the end of the road and the ferry terminal, you look across the sea and see a huge mountainous, almost forbidding, island rising up in front of you. I felt a frisson of excitement, or was I just a bit nervous, as I had also just seen a rusting car ferry approaching the small pier?

We crossed without mishap, but left the ferry stuck behind a convoy of trucks carrying construction materials ready to concrete over this beautiful island. From the ferry stop, the road rises abruptly over a small hill and then as it comes down the other side we enter tourist land. Although we knew the sparkling white beach was just metres from the road, we were denied a first sight for quite some time. Not by rows of palm trees but by rows of shops selling tourist tat. We couldn't even see these too well because of all the dust thrown up by the trucks. Fortunately the tourist shops thinned out within 20 minutes and shortly afterwards we arrived at our destination: Seaview Resort. We weren't disappointed. We had been promised fine white sand and clear turquoise water and we got it. Only problem was there was just a few feet of white sand and that was mostly covered in beach towels from the overweight European tourists who had got there before us. Ah well not to worry, we could explore up the beach for a quiet spot later. We checked out the rooms and facilities and everything was just as you would expect from a mid-range hotel. It also had quite a nice little restaurant right on the beach and therefore great for a cold beer and our first sunset – perfect!

The following morning after cold bacon and eggs for breakfast it seemed that the same people from yesterday were hogging the sun beds and beach space again so we decided to walk down the beach and explore a little further afield. In actual fact I was very pleasantly surprised. I was expecting the whole beach to be lined with resorts packed side to side but actually on this beach there was still plenty of space for developers. The closest buildings to us were a couple of beachside family-run cheap and cheerful restaurants with bamboo chairs and tables. At 300 metres away, they were also just too far away for most of the package tourists. And this was generally where we spent most of our days. An added bonus was that at the shack – White Sands to give it its official name (the name was on a piece of driftwood tacked to a nearby palm tree), the food was far, far superior to the resort. Whereas the resort chefs had removed any local flavour from their creations, the White Sands staff had managed to keep their food authentic.

So, most of our days were spent relaxing by the sea but one day we went with the imaginatively titled 'Fun' cruise for a trip round the islands further south. We were ready at the appointed place and time (8.40) and sure enough at 8.40 local time (9.15 by my watch) the boat appeared to pick us up from the beach. We climbed aboard to see it was already quite full. More room for everyone cries the captain – plenty of room on the floor! It wasn't an auspicious start but I must admit it got better throughout the day.

We steamed south. From the sea we could see the extent of the development on Coconut Island. There were plenty more resorts being built, the backdrops of swaying palms had become construction sites and the lush green hillsides had become bare red scars soon to be covered with tourist developments. However, our day was spent steaming from one little island to the next with plenty of opportunity for snorkelling and swimming. At four we turned around and were dropped off at our hotel just after sunset. I'm usually sceptical of these organized trips but I would certainly recommend this one. Not too bad for the price – Oh, I forgot to mention the lunch on board was excellent also.

Before too long our sojourn on Coconut Island was over. Overall, I was pleasantly surprised. Okay, it's getting developed but you can still find pristine beaches by spending a little bit more effort to get there. In general most of the development is on the beach and so the interior is still magnificent. It'll take another few years yet to spoil it, so my advice is to enjoy it while you can.

APPENDIX

Guidelines for writing a summary of a text

The purpose of a summary is to give the reader, in a about 1/3 of the original length of an article/lecture, a clear, objective picture of the original lecture or text. Most importantly, the summary restates only the main points of a text or a lecture without giving examples or details, such as dates, numbers or statistics.

Before writing the summary:

For a text, read, mark, and annotate the original:

- highlight the topic sentence
- highlight key points/key words/phrases
- highlight the concluding sentence
- outline each paragraph in the margin

Take notes on the following:

- the source (author--first/last name, title, date of publication, volume number, place of publication, publisher, URL, etc.)
- the main idea of the original (paraphrased)
- the major supporting points (in outline form)
- major supporting explanations (e.g. reasons/causes or effects)

Writing your summary:

1. Organize your notes into an outline which includes main ideas and supporting points but no examples or details (dates, numbers, statistics).
2. Write an introductory paragraph that begins with a frame, including an in-text citation of the source and the author as well as a reporting verb to introduce the main idea. The reporting verb is generally in present tense.
3. Support your topic sentence with the necessary reasons or arguments raised by the author/lecturer but omit all references to details, such as dates or statistics.
4. Use discourse markers that reflect the organization and controlling idea of the original, for example cause-effect, comparison-contrast, classification, process, chronological order, persuasive argument, etc.

How to Make a Career Choice When You Are Undecided

8 Steps to Choosing a Career

BY DAWN ROSENBERG MCKAY Updated April 19, 2018

With thousands of options, how will you pick a career that's right for you? If you don't have any idea what you want to do, the task may seem insurmountable. Fortunately, it isn't. Put enough thought into it, and you will increase your chances of making a good decision.

01 Assess Yourself

Learn about yourself through a self assessment

Before you can choose the right career, you must learn about yourself. Your values, interests, soft skills, and aptitudes, in combination with your personality type, make some occupations a good fit for you and others completely inappropriate.

Use self-assessment tools, often called career tests, to gather information about your traits and, subsequently generate a list of occupations that are a good fit based on them. Some people choose to work with a career counselor or other career development professionals who can help them navigate this process.

02 Make a List of Occupations to Explore

You probably have multiple lists of occupations in front of you at this point—one generated by each of the self-assessment tools you used. To keep yourself organized, you should combine them into one master list.

First, look for careers that appear on multiple lists and copy them onto a blank page. Title it "Occupations to Explore." Your self-assessment indicated they are a good fit for you based on several of your traits, so definitely consider them.

Next, find any occupations on your lists that appeal to you. They may be careers you know a bit about and want to explore further. Also, include professions about which you don't know much. You might learn something unexpected. Add those to your master list.

03 Explore the Occupations on Your List

Now get some basic information about each of the occupations on your list. You will be thrilled you managed to narrow your list down to only 10 to 20 options!

Find job descriptions and educational, training and licensing requirements in published sources. Learn about advancement opportunities. Use government-produced labor market information to get data about earnings and job outlook.

04 Create a "Short List"

At this point, start to narrow down your list even more. Based on what you learned from your research so far, begin eliminating the careers you don't want to pursue any further. You should end up with fewer than two to five occupations on your "short list."

If your reasons for finding a career unacceptable are non-negotiable, cross it off your list. Remove everything with duties that don't appeal to you. Eliminate careers that have weak job outlooks. Get rid of any occupation if you are unable to or unwilling to fulfill the educational or other requirements, or if you lack some of the soft skills necessary to succeed in it.

05 Conduct Informational Interviews

When you have only a few occupations left on your list, start doing more in-depth research. Arrange to meet with people who work in the occupations in which you are interested. They can provide firsthand knowledge about the careers on your short list. Access your network, including LinkedIn, to find people with whom to have these informational interviews.

06 Make Your Career Choice

Finally, after doing all your research, you are probably ready to make your choice. Pick the occupation that you think will bring you the most satisfaction based on all the information you have gathered. Realize that you are allowed do-overs if you change your mind about your choice at any point in your life. Many people change their careers at least a few times.

07 Identify Your Goals

Once you make a decision, identify your long- and short-term goals. Doing this will allow you to eventually work in your chosen field. Long-term goals typically take about three to five years to reach, while you can usually fulfill a short-term goal in six months to three years.

Let the research you did about required education and training be your guide. If you don't have all the details, do some more research. Once you have all the information you need, set your goals. An example of a long-term goal would be completing your education and training.

Short-term goals include applying to college, apprenticeships, or other training programs, and doing internships.

08 Write a Career Action Plan

Put together a career action plan, a written document that lays out all the steps you will have to take to reach your goals. Think of it as a roadmap that will take you from point A to B, and then to C and D. Write down all your short- and long-term goals and the steps you will have to take to reach each one. Include any anticipated barriers that could get in the way of achieving your goals and the ways you can overcome them.

TEA and the British

The father of modern economics, Adam Smith, once described the British as a "nation of shopkeepers". He might just as easily have described them as a nation of tea-drinkers, since tea has long been a national favourite. The image of the tea-drinking British is not just a myth; it is a reflection of reality. Today, tea accounts for 43% of all the drink consumed in Britain, excluding plain water

Tea-time in a traditional English tea-room : tea, scones and cream, and cake.

There was a time in the 1960's and 1970's when some people believed that coffee would replace tea as Britain's favourite beverage.

In the event, that did not occur, and today, tea remains firmly anchored as Britain's favourite drink, accounting for over two fifths of all the drink consumed in Britain with the exception of water.

To say that the British are fond of tea is something of an understatement. From the Royal Family down to the humblest of the homeless and the out-of-work, tea is more than just a pleasure; it is an essential part of life! It is one of those things that distinguishes life in Britain from life anywhere else. The average Briton over the age of 10 drinks three and a half cups of tea per day, or 1,355 cups per year – mostly tea with milk in it — which puts Britain miles ahead of any other country in the international league of tea-drinking nations! Second and third in the league are the New Zealanders (889 cups) and the Australians (642 cups); in Europe, the nearest rival to Britain is Russia, where people only consume on average 325 cups of tea per year.

The popularity of tea in the United Kingdom has a long history, reflecting the nation's development since the seventeenth century. It was in 1657 that Thomas Garway, the owner of a coffee house, sold the first tea in London. The drink soon became popular as an alternative to coffee, and by the year 1700, there were over 500 coffee houses in the British capital selling the new drink.

In those days however, it was not something for anyone; the cost of a pound of tea in the year 1700 (up to 36 shillings a pound) was almost the same as it was in 1985 (average: £1.80 a pound).... but in 1700, a working man earned one shilling a week, compared to £140 in

For a century and a half, tea remained an expensive drink; many employers served a cup of it to their workers in the middle of the morning, thus inventing a lasting British institution, the "tea break"; but as a social drink outside the workplace, tea was reserved for the nobility and for the growing middle classes. Among those who had the means, it became very popular as a drink to be enjoyed in cafés and "tea gardens".

It was the 7th Duchess of Bedford who, in around 1800, started the popular fashion of "afternoon tea", a ceremony taking place at about four o'clock. Until then, people did not usually eat or drink anything between lunch and dinner. At approximately the same time, the Earl of Sandwich popularised a new way of eating bread — in thin slices, with something (e.g. jam or cucumbers) between them, and before long, a small meal at the end of the afternoon, involving tea and sandwiches had become part of a way of life.

As tea became much cheaper during the nineteenth century, its popularity spread right through British society, and before long, it had become Britain's favourite drink — promoted by the Victorians as an economical, warming, stimulating non-alcoholic drink. In working-class households, it was served with the main meal of the day, eaten when workers returned home after a day's labour. This meal has become known as "high tea".

Today, tea can be drunk at any time of day. The large majority of people in Britain drink tea for breakfast: the mid-morning "tea break" is an institution in British offices and factories (though some people prefer coffee at this time of day); and for anyone working outdoors, a thermos of tea is almost an essential part of the day's equipment. Later in the day, "afternoon tea" is still a way of life in the south of England and among the middle classes, whereas "high tea" has remained a tradition in the north of Britain.

A CLASSIC ENGLISH "CUPPA"

To make tea. Put two teabags or teaspoonfuls of tea into a warmed pot. Add boiling water, and leave to brew for three or four minutes. Serve with a dash of milk and/or sugar. Tea without sugar is the best accompaniment with sweet snacks (biscuits, jam sandwiches, cakes).

Some brands of tea:

Ty-Phoo, Brooke Bond etc. "Standard" British teas are Indian varieties, which can be drunk quite strong.

Varieties of tea:

The best Indian tea is reputed to be Darjeeling tea. Assam tea is a much darker stronger tea. China teas are more delicate: the most popular are Keemun and Lapsang Souchong.

"Earl Grey" tea is a blend of China and Darjeeling, flavoured with oil of bergamot.

Tea and the British

Here is a summary of the article on tea. However, it contains 10 errors of fact. Can you find them, and correct them. After doing this, try to rewrite this résumé, changing as much of the expression as you can, without changing the meaning.

Tea is the most popular drink in Britain, accounting for almost half the liquid consumed by people in Britain; furthermore, the British are the world's biggest tea drinkers — having been so ever since Thomas Garway became the first person to sell tea in London, in the year 1567.

Three hundred years ago, however, tea was a very expensive drink. Nevertheless, the great British tradition of the "tea break" began very early on, as employees got into the habit of serving tea to their workers in the middle of the day. As a social drink, tea was initially reserved for the middle classes and the nobility, who could not afford it.

The ceremony of "afternoon tea", a snack of tea and sandwiches between lunch and dinner, was invented by the Earl of Sandwich in the early eighteenth century; then the drink became very popular with the Victorians, who preferred it to alcoholic beverages.

Today, tea is still extremely popular, since it can be drunk at mealtimes at any time of the day

FAST FOOD, GOOD OR BAD ?

An intermediate level EFL resource

In Britain, a lot of people say that teenagers do not eat good food. Television chefs have tried to encourage teenagers and young people to eat better food; but still, lots of young people in Britain prefer a daily diet of hamburgers and other fast food. Freeway magazine asked some British teenagers for their opinion about "fast food".

FREEWAY: People say that today's young people like nothing apart from "fast food"; do you think this is true? And what do you think of fast food?

GORDON: I don't have anything against it, really! It's O.K! I mean, you hear people saying it's all junk food, but most of the time it tastes good. Though I wouldn't want to live off it all the time!

DANNY: Yeah, if you mean hamburgers and whatever, there's nothing wrong with them. They're good food! They fill you up; and that's what food's supposed to do, isn't it? I mean there's meat, vegetables and bread and cheese; as far as I'm concerned, that's a pretty balanced diet.

GORDON: Yeah, hamburgers are all right. I mean, my mum says it's all junk, but frankly I can't really see what makes it any different from the stuff she cooks. I mean bread's bread, isn't it, and steak's steak, as far as I'm concerned.

KATHY: I tend to agree. Like, personally I'm not all that keen on hamburgers - they just make you fat - but if you go to a McDonald's or somewhere like that, you can get salads and things too....

JO: Well yes, 'course you can, but that's not the point, is it? I mean the thing about junk food is that it's all deep frozen, it's never fresh....

KATHY: What d'you mean? You can't get deep-frozen salads...

JO: Well maybe not the salads... but the rest's all deep frozen industrial stuff.

GORDON: But so's most of the food you get these days...

JO: It isn't at all! What about all the organic stuff, and fresh meat and things like that.

GORDON: Yes, OK... but who says its any better than deep frozen stuff?

DANNY: It certainly doesn't taste better, and it's much more hassle.

FREEWAY: Don't you eat fresh food at home then?

DANNY: Yeah, of course, from time to time; but most of the time my mum does stuff out of the deep freeze. It's good!

JO: what sort of stuff?

DANNY: All sorts of stuff. Pizzas, fish fingers, lasagna, things like that.

JO: You're not really suggesting that deep frozen pizza's as good as the real thing, are you?

DANNY: What d'you mean 'the real thing'? Deep frozen pizza's perfectly real, and fine by me... once it's been heated up, I mean!

KATHY: Anyway, who eats home-made pizza at home anyway? No-one does! D'you?

JO: No, 'cos I'm a vegetarian!

KATHY: That doesn't stop you eating pizza, does it?

JO: It depends what kind of pizza it is, doesn't it? I mean I love a good vegetarian pizza.

DANNY: D'you eat cheese then?

JO: Yes, I'm not vegan.

GORDON: I think you've got to be sensible about it really: like as I said, I like hamburgers, but I wouldn't want to go round eating them every day; and there's some things that are better than others, obviously. I mean, look at chicken nuggets fr instance. People think they're eating meat, but they're 90% nugget and only 10% meat. I reckon things like that are a rip off; you're really being conned!

JO: But it's the same with all junk food, isn't it?

GORDON: What d'you know about it? You just said you were a veggie!

JO: Yeah, I am now, but I didn't use to be! If you want to know, the reason I went vegetarian is because I got sick of tasteless junk food.

DANNY: Maybe you ate the wrong stuff! Most of the things I eat are pretty tasty, to be quite honest!

JO: Yeah, I'm sure they are! But it's all done with chemicals and flavourings, isn't it? You never know what you're eating!

DANNY: So what, it's not poison, is it? You can kill yourself by eating poisonous mushrooms, can't you, and they're quite natural...

GORDON: And organic....

JO: Well look at mad cow disease...

GORDON: Well that was an extreme case, wasn't it? An' anyway, how many people have caught it? About twenty! Probably as many as died from eating bad fruit....

WORDS:

conned: deceived, tricked - diet: what you eat - fine by me: good, in my opinion - frankly: honestly - junk: rubbish, very poor quality - hassle: trouble - I'm not all that keen on: I don't particularly like - mad cow disease: a fatal illness of cows, BSE - organic: natural, produced without chemicals - pretty: quite - rip off: a deception, very bad value for money - stuff: things - the point: the subject - vegan: someone who eats no animal products at all.

Worksheet:

► Blank fill exercise: Complete this part of the dialogue from memory. When correcting this exercise, take care to allow any acceptable alternatives, not just the words that are in the original text.

GORDON: I don't have _____ against it, really! It's O.K! I mean, you hear people _____ it's all junk food, but most of the time it _____ good. Though I wouldn't _____ to live off it all the time!

SPORTSGames that England gave the world

Football (soccer) and Rugby are two of the most successful products ever invented in England. Today these games are played worldwide. This article looks at their early days, and at how Football was first exported to Brazil

Charles Miller, the father of football in Brazil*How football first came to Brazil

At the end of the nineteenth century, an Englishman living in Brazil sent his son across the Atlantic to be educated in England. Charles Miller went to school, then to university, where he took part enthusiastically in all aspects of life. Sport was one of them; a hundred years ago, Britain already had an established sporting culture.

During his English years, Charles grew passionately keen on football (i.e.soccer), and when in 1894 he packed his bags to return to his family in Brazil, among the things he took with him were half a dozen footballs.

Back in Brazil, he tried to get other people interested in the game. At first he had little success; the only people who showed any interest were other expatriate Brits; thus the first game of football in Brazil was played between two teams of young Englishmen, on a field from which the goats had first been removed.

Charles asked some journalists to come and see this new English game, but none came along. On the other hand, as the weeks went past, the spectacle of twenty-two young Inglés running round after a ball began attracting spectators from houses nearby; before long, young local men began kicking balls round too. "Balls" is perhaps the wrong word - the only footballs in Brazil at the time were the ones that Charles Miller had brought back with him from England. The first Brazilian amateurs had to concoct their own balls, using whatever they could find to make them with.

English football players in 1881

Nevertheless, even without real balls, there was plenty of enthusiasm for the new game, as "football" became the great attraction in the popular quarters of Sao Paulo, just like basketball is the great street-sport today in many world cities. By 1901, there was already a league of clubs in Sao Paulo, and the journalists who had originally laughed at the crazy English sport, were jumping on the bandwagon, writing enthusiastically about the popular new game.

The rest, as they say, is history.

The origins of football and rugby

But how did English football, or soccer, and its sister-game Rugby, originate? And why did it happen in England?

The origins of football go back hundreds of years, and there are several towns and villages in England where ancient forms of football are still played. The original game had few rules, and differed from place to place. Basically the teams just had to try and get a ball (or some other object) past the opponent's line. Sometimes the lines were over a mile apart, and the field was the village street.... or even a field with no limits! People could kick the ball (and their opponents), run with it, throw it - anything was allowed.

Football at an English public school in 1889

In the nineteenth century, public schools developed fast; and since many of them were boarding schools, they had to keep boys occupied all day. Sport was a popular way of doing this; at first each school had its own games, with its own rules; but slowly fixed rules became established. In many schools, carrying the ball was not allowed; the game was called "football". Some schools however preferred a version of the game where players were allowed to carry the ball; one of these schools was in the small town of Rugby.

In 1863, a group of enthusiasts, who had played ball games at different schools, met in London to fix rules for the game. They formed the Football Association. Eighteen years later, as the game was getting more and more popular, they organised the first F.A.Cup competition.

Following the example of schools and colleges, the owners of factories (many of whom had been educated at public schools) began encouraging employees to form teams, and football soon became very popular in the industrial north of England. By 1888, the game had become popular enough to support professional clubs, with 12 original clubs forming the Football League.

Since then, the popularity of both football and rugby has continued to spread across the world; and though rugby has not been adopted in all countries, there is probably no country in the world where football is now unknown.

ON THE MOVE

If you're planning a holiday, learn this essential vocabulary for types of holiday and holiday preparation.!

Planning a holiday

Many people take their main holiday in summer, and although some people choose a last-minute break, others plan their holiday months in advance.

The beginning of the year is a good time for people to start looking at holiday brochures. Tour operators (companies that organise holidays) as well as travel agents (the people that sell holidays) give lots of information about holiday destinations and types of holiday.

Types of holiday

As well as the traditional two-week beach holiday, you can choose from a range of holidays: a cruise (holiday on a ship), an activity holiday (a holiday that involves walking, cycling, climbing or other sports), a city break (a weekend or a few days in a different city) and so on. A lot of people choose a package holiday, where flights and accommodation are included in the price. But many people prefer an independent holiday, where they make their own travel arrangements.

If you can't travel abroad, you can also choose a staycation – a mix of "vacation" (holiday) and "staying at home". This is where you still take a week or two for a break, but do fun activities in your own city, region or country.

If you travel independently, you will need to book your flights or train tickets. Unless you have an onward destination, you will probably book a return journey. Then you will need to make a reservation at a hotel, or another place to stay, such as a campsite (if you are camping in a tent), or a caravan site (if you are staying in a caravan), or a B&B (a bed and breakfast).

Holiday preparations

For all types of foreign holidays, it is essential that you check you have all your travel documents. Make sure your passport hasn't expired, and that you have a visa if necessary. If you are travelling to some countries, you also need to make sure that all your vaccinations (protection against illness) are up to date. For some countries you might need a vaccination against hepatitis, or yellow fever, for example.

As your departure date gets nearer, you can start to plan the details of your journey. Perhaps it will be a good idea to buy a guide book, or a phrase book, if you don't speak much of the local language. Some people like to read up on (= get lots of background information) where they are going, and find out about the places of interest and "must-see" • sights. It's also fun to make a packing list, so you don't forget any vital clothes or toiletries.

It's also a good idea to buy local currency in advance, if your flight gets in (= arrives) in the middle of the night, when no banks are open. Most airlines also advise you to take out (=get) travel insurance just in case your flight is delayed or cancelled, or if you get ill and need to be repatriated (sent back to your country).

Don't forget to make arrangements for your pets and your house while you're away. Put your dog into kennels (a dog hotel), and leave a key with your neighbour just in case! Hopefully your neighbour will keep an eye on your house while you're on holiday! Finally, get to the airport with plenty of time to spare. Nowadays it can take much longer to get through security and onto the plane. Have a nice trip and send your neighbour a postcard.
